Enrolment below estimate

For the second year running the enrolment has fallen below estimates. In fact, if one compares preliminary registration week figures, the enrolment will be the same as last year or, at worst, down by as many as 100 full-time students. Preliminary figures do not include late registrants or withdrawals, and a final enrolment figure can not be made until December 1.

(See the accompanying table for a detailed breakdown of preliminary registration figures for this year and last, actual enrolment on December 1, 1970, and the projected enrolment for December 1, 1971.)

The provincial government grant to the University this year is $2,848 per full-time student; there is no grant for part-time students. By a new arrangement between the government and Alberta universities, the total of the grant was determined on a reasonable projection of the enrolment. The 19,500 figure for The University of Alberta was the estimate adopted by the Universities Commission.

If the enrolment is roughly the same as last year, it will be over 1,000 lower than the budget estimate.

According to President MAX WYMAN, the University's budget will not be affected until next year. It will be impossible to assess the effects on the 1972-73 budget until the new grant per student has been determined later this year.

Last year's enrolment also fell more than 1,000 below the 1970-71 estimate of 19,400, though it represented an actual increase in numbers of some six percent. Previous years saw the enrolment invariably exceed estimates.

"Through the sixties we became accustomed to increases of 12 per cent every year, an increase disproportionate to the age group's growth," said Registrar A. D. CAIRNS. "Now it is beginning to level off."

Dr. Wyman said, "We had been assuming that the proportion of young people entering universities in Canada would continue until it reached the 50 per cent level of the United States. Obviously this is not the case. There seems to be a deep sociological change involved and young people are asking some

ENROLMENT OF FULL-TIME STUDENTS AT THE UNIVERSITY OF ALBERTA

Why are registration figures so important?

The whole financial picture at The University of Alberta depends upon the number of full-time students enrolled. The annual grant from the provincial government is calculated on the basis of full-time enrolment. This year the grant was $2,848 per student (there is no grant for part-time students) based on the enrolment estimate of 19,500 made last February, a total of $55,550,000. Final registration figures used in determining the budget are as of December 1 and take into consideration late registrants and withdrawals.

Preliminary figures available at the end of Registration Week give some indication of what the student population will be. According to the actual number of students who registered last week, enrolment for 1971-72 should be the same as last year or down as many as 100 students.

Because the grant has already been calculated for this year, there will be no effects on the budget until the 1972-73 fiscal year. The extent of any budgetary changes cannot be assessed until the final enrolment has been determined after December 1, 1971, and until the size of the government grant for next year is known.

Figures for preliminary enrolment this year and last and actual enrolment on December 1, 1970 were provided by the Registrar, A. D. CAIRNS. The breakdown of the budget estimate for this year was provided by PETER HANEY, Institutional Research and Planning.

important new questions about their education."

Socio-economic factors have not yet been incorporated into enrolment projections as yet, nor have they been studied to any extent, although they have been the subject of considerable speculation. Estimates such as the 19,500 figure are based on historic retention rates, that is, on the proportion of students who enter and remain in each faculty in each year of a program. The data used covers the past four years, but it may be necessary to base next year's projections on information from the preceeding two years instead. The projection made by Institutional Research and Planning last February was 19,600 full-time students for 1971-72; projections made this summer by the Registrar's office saw the number between 18,750 and 19,000.

In addition to full-time students, 3,633 part-time students have been registered, compared with 890 last year. This increase is largely due to the inclusion of evening credit students this year, a result of merging the Evening Credit Program with the regular program.
